Tow trucks light- to heavy-duty were staged near the convention center for judging.

Show-goers did double-takes when "The King" made an appearance. Richard Petty look-a-like Charles West was sponsored by Miller Industries and Hino Trucks. At left is Lisa Ennis of the Professional Wrecker Operators of Florida.

Towing and recovery hardware at the show ranged from mega to mini – with interesting pieces mixed in.

A popular display was the Tennessee Highway Patrol's Mobile Inspection Station – the only one of its kind. The $1.4 million MIS bristles with technology, including a dispatch/communication system, satellite communication, infrared camera and a 360-degree rotating elevated camera. The station can also serve as an emergency command post.
